Grayson DeSmet

I did a lot of good deeds, but nothing was better than the two things I chose to write about. I chose to write about hedging and mowing the lawn

First, I woke up at six in the morning. I was still very tired, but I had to hedge the bushes. I wasn't paying attention and my fingers got caught in the hedger. I could have gone inside and cover the wound, but instead; I decided to continue and hedge without being asked to.

Last, I got home from school and decide to mow because I thought I needed to. I mowed three acres of land; I wasn't told to. I just decided to do it. It felt good to do something without being told.

These two deeds were the best out of all my good deeds. These past weeks; I have done nothing but kind deeds and it felt good to do these deeds.
