

A Divine Deed for a Fine Feeling

Janai Powell/Steffan Watts

Out of all of our essays our mothers liked this one the best. For this project and because we decided to we did nice things for our mothers in order to make their lives easier we didn't just do it for a grade but we did just to do something kind.

Some of the things we did were taking out the trash without being told but that may not sound like much to but to our mothers it means much more.

Besides that my partner and I we both tried to make their birthdays the best could possibly be we did others things that was different as well as that. Like we're both working on trying to stop talking back but with me I'm trying to avoid doing that with attitude because that only makes it worse. And if you ever seen my mother mad you'll know why I'm trying to stop but like everything else in life things like that happen over time. But with me that could take a while so hopefully it happens sooner than later.

One good thing about doing good deeds or bad ones is we get to learn from them. Because being able to make mistakes is okay as long as we can get something from them so we won't make the same mistakes again. Like running our mouths back to our mother or not simply doing our chores simple things like that. By not doing these simple things an bad things come as a consequence from that like we don't get something we want or be able to go anywhere the next time we need to do these things we'll know that if we don't we're only preventing ourselves from our personal wants.

So now we see why our mothers love this essay so much. Because doing nice things can not only make our mother's lives easier but ours as well. And hopefully we learned a lot more different ways to be nice to someone and you'll get a good feeling about ourselves living on to accomplish great deeds which could make someone's day in the process.
