

Helping Hand

...by Thomas Carlson

The feeling one gets when helping someone in need is one of the greatest feelings one can get. I helped an old lady open the door and did yard work for my neighbor.

On Monday, March 19th I helped a handicapped lady open the door. She had her cane in one hand and her purse in the other. I was walking to the haircutters and she was going into the Radio Shack. I saw that she was unable to open the door so I walked over and opened it for her. She had a bright smile on her face and said thank you. People in Radio Shack were watching what I did, and that made me feel really good.

The next day after school I went over to my neighbors. It is an older woman and her husband just went through cancer surgery a few months ago. Sometimes I will go to do yard work over there and they always pay me by the hour. This time I worked for a few hours and told them I did not need the money. It felt really good to do something nice for them.

Helping the old lady and my neighbors made me feel on top of the world the rest of the day. I hope that when someone does something kind; It makes them get inspired to do a random act of kindness.
